•The US Army Corps of Engineers (USACE), through its Interagency and International Services (IIS) Program provides reimbursable technical assistance to non-Dod Federal, state and local agencies, Tribal nations, private Industry, and foreign governments

•USACE support to other agencies helps them meet their program challenges while avoiding duplication of Federal capabilities and agency start up and closeout activities. Under the USACE IIS program, state and local governments are able to access Corps unique support capabilities

•The IIS program also enables other Government agencies and the private sector to access cost-saving technologies and expertise from USACE laboratories and technical centers of expertise.

•USACE, through its IIS program, functions largely as a Federal contract manager using the talents of the private sector to accomplish actual design and construction tasks. Highly competent Federal management support and private sector technical support is a combination that best serves the
